NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

BREWER'S WHARF.

In case the conditions are such that solid coral is encountered in the driving of any of the standard piles in the Brewer's wharf of such thickness that in the opinion of the Superintendent of Public Works or his assistant it is impracticable to go deeper, the successful contractor will not be required to drive down to the full length of piles as specified. Hard crusts or seams will, in many places be encountered, through which the piles can be driven by blasting, and in such cases the full lengths of piles, as specified, are to be driven.

Rightness in clothes is a need that interests every man. Fabric without fit, fit without style, style without quality, means ruin to any clothes. But wrought together with cunning needle, they make Right Clothes. Are you quite satisfied with your custom-made clothes? Are they Right? As for the ordinary ready-made crowd the STEIN-BLOCH Smart Clothes are head and shoulders above them. Custom tailors wonder how they are planned to do it. You will find slipping a suit on a profitable experience. Our Winter assortment is complete and unequalled in breadth of choice and distinction of style.

CHARLES RAVEN WEDS MISS LILIAN STACK

Beneath a wedding bell of smiles, ferns and white convolvulus, glittering with electric lights, to the soft strains of a wedding march Miss Lillian Stack became the wife of Charles Hamilton Raven last night. The wedding, which was held at Helens court, and was attended by only a few of the friends of the bride and groom, was one of the prettiest affairs that has been seen of late in Honolulu. The scheme of decoration was green and white in the parlor, while the dining room was a picture in red.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine over white silk cut entraine, the dress being trimmed with real lace. She wore a lily of the valley in her hair and carried bride's roses. She made a truly beautiful bride. Miss Helen McCarthy, the bridesmaid, wore white silk trimmed with real lace. The groom and his best man, R. J. Taylor, were dressed in the conventional black.

Mrs. Hammer played Mendelssohn's wedding march as the couple took their places in a bower of foliage over which hung a magnificent floral bell, with an electric globe for a clapper. Bishop Gilbert officiated. After the ceremony the company repaired to the dining-room, where light refreshments were served. Then the newly married couple left amid a shower of rice. The presents were both numerous and costly. The Customs House force, of which the groom is a member, sent a magnificent set of silver and the church society sent a set of silver spoons. The presents from individuals were too numerous to mention. They consisted of cut glass, silverware, china and many other things, both useful and ornamental.

The bride is one of Honolulu's most charming young ladies, a prominent member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and lately stenographer at the naval station. The groom is a member of the Customs House force and is a popular young man.

KUROKI IS BAD SHOT

Hare Tells Good Stories of Life Before Mukden.

J. H. Hare, correspondent for Colliers, and one of the few men who really reached the front in the Russo-Japanese war, is a passenger to the States on the Coptic. He is on his way home for a furlough and says that he may have to return for the opening of the campaign this spring. Hare is the man who has been furnishing most of the war photographs that have appeared in Colliers. He joined General Kuroki at the commencement of his campaign and has been with him ever since. He was at the battle of Liaoyang and was among the first to enter the city. He saw Grant Wallace there and, although he makes no claim himself, reports are that he and Wallace were the only men on the Japanese side who really saw the battle. Hare was with Kuroki's army and Wallace was with Oku.

He proceeded northward with the army in pursuit of Kuropatkin and was with the Japanese on the banks of the Shaho until a few weeks ago. He says that he does not believe that there have been any large engagements recently although there may have been outpost skirmishes. The Japanese army is practically without intrenchments and is living mostly in dugouts. There is little snow although it is intensely cold and the ground is frozen so hard that trenching without the use of dynamite is an utter impossibility. In fact when he left the armies were lying dormant.

KUROKI COULDN'T SHOOT.

Mr. Hare laughed heartily when told that a report had been circulated that General Kuroki was dead. "It reminds me of the time when Mark Twain was seen by a reporter in regard to a report of his death," asked Mr. Hare. "The great humorist replied that he could say that the report had been greatly exaggerated. I saw General Kuroki the day I left and he was very far from being dead. He is a fine man and treated me well. The day before I left the staff and attaches had target practice. Col. Hume of the British army made the highest score, General Ian Hamilton of Boer war fame the second while General Kuroki, General Fujii, his chief of staff, Col. Hageno and myself all made the same score—that is we didn't hit the target at all."

BETWEEN THE LINES.

Much of the territory along the Shaho is neutral, sometimes being in the hands of one party and sometimes of the other. Mr. Hare tells a new story of life between the lines that he will not vouch for himself, but which he heard from a Japanese officer, and believes to be true. According to the story there is a certain cave in the neutral strip which was captured and recaptured nearly every day. At night the Japanese would sneak up and take the position, but when day came the Russians would come up with a superior force and retake it, as their artillery helped to make the place untenable.

Now, the Japanese soldiers are very neat and cleanly, but the Russians are not, so that after taking the cave one night the Japs found it in a very dirty condition, so when they were driven out of it next day they left a bottle of whisky and a note reading, "Why don't you keep this place clean?" When they captured it again the next night they found two roubles and another note, reading, "Why don't you treat your prisoners better?" To this the Japanese replied by a note written in Russian by Colonel Hageno, who is the Russian scholar of Kuroki's staff, saying ironically, "We do," with proof in the shape of some of Hare's photographs of Japanese prisoners attached.

HOW THE ARMIES LIE.

The two armies are encamped along the banks of the Shaho, the Japanese position being about twelve miles south of Mukden. The front of the armies is about thirty miles long. Mr. Hare said that he could not say just how many men the Japanese had, but that it was somewhere in the neighborhood of 250,000 though at the time he left it was being greatly augmented by reinforcements from the Port Arthur army.

PICKED BOMB UP HAND BLOWN OFF

Charlie Craddy picked up a Chinese bomb on the sidewalk early this morning with the result that he had a thumb blown off and his hand shattered. The patrol wagon took him from the station to the hospital in two minutes, the fastest time on record. His wounds were dressed.

FAST TRAVELING.

A lad with a touch of malaria, enlisted to fight in Bulgaria, but before he could shoot a Turk hollered "Scout!" And they found him next day in Bavaria.

COPTIC TAKES MAIL TODAY

The Occidental and Oriental liner Coptic arrived off port at 5:20 yesterday evening and docked at the Hackfeld wharf at about 7:30 p. m. In coming up the harbor her pilot mistook the red light on a schooner in Naval Row for the red light on the Hackfeld wharf and for a moment it looked as if the big liner would crash into the Railway wharf No. 1. The mistake was discovered in time, however, and the steamer backed out into the stream and coming up to her dock made an exceedingly good landing.

The liner has seventeen cabin passengers. One, Mr. James J. Kelley, a customs officer in this city, is returning from an extended tour of the Orient. The Coptic has about 2200 tons of through freight, a large shipment of silk being a portion of the cargo. About 300 tons of merchandise were discharged here last night. There are some 300 Asiatics for this port.

Among the cabin passengers are J. H. Hare, the war correspondent, T. R. Henderson, prominent hemp planter of Manila and Mrs. J. M. Bell, wife of General Bell.

The Coptic sails for San Francisco at 9 a. m. today.

LOGAN GETS IN AHEAD OF TIME

Quite unexpected was the arrival of the transport Logan from Manila via Nagasaki yesterday afternoon. She is one of the slower boats and the east-bound transports are rarely in before the 4th or 5th of the month. When her smoke was seen she was reported as the transport Dix, which is due any day, but as she approached the familiar outlines of the Logan were recognized.

The transport carries the Eighteenth United States Infantry. Besides a large number of cabin and second class passengers she has the following in the stowage:

446 enlisted men, Eighteenth Infantry, 230 men Prov. Companies Nos. 1 and 2, 2 insane soldiers, 75 enlisted men (casuals), 23 enlisted men (U. S. Navy and Marines), 51 civilians, 29 discharged soldiers, 22 general prisoners. From Manila to Honolulu—27 Japanese employees of Milliken Bros. (from Midway). From Nagasaki to San Francisco—24 discharged soldiers (1 civilian), total 910.

The trip over was uneventful but rough. The transport will get away for San Francisco at 9 this morning. Among those departing from Honolulu will be Lieutenant Slattery.

SHERIDAN HAS A BIG CARGO

The United States transport Sheridan seems to have struck the same weather that all the other down boats have—several days of storm and the last two fair weather. She arrived in port early yesterday morning with four days' mail. She has 68 cabin passengers and 5000 tons of freight for Manila, the largest cargo she has ever taken out of San Francisco. Captain Peabody was very ill when the ship left the coast, being threatened with pneumonia. She will sail at 11 o'clock today for Manila direct.

Zealanders Prefer Pigeons to Cable.

TACOMA, Jan. 23.—The people of New Zealand have largely refused to patronize the cable recently opened between New Zealand and Australia because they prefer the old method of sending their messages by carrier pigeon. C. C. Buckland, who is en route home to Auckland via Vancouver, says this is not surprising when one realizes to what an extent New Zealanders have depended on pigeons to carry their messages in years past. He declares that the pigeon service to this time has given a great deal more satisfaction than the cable.

The breeding of pigeons is a regular business in New Zealand. Pigeon racing is a national pastime and in racing them the winners are timed to the fraction of a second.

Colonies—Per Sonoma, Feb. 8.
Yokohama—Per Manchuria, today.
Victoria—Per Moana, Feb. 8.

FIGHTING REGIMENT

Proud Record of 18th Infantry Now in Port.

The Eighteenth United States Infantry, which is returning from the Philippines on the transport Logan, has a long and honorable record, and there will be many "battle rings" around the staff of the new regimental colors which will be ordered as soon as the "Eighteenth" reaches the States. The regiment was first organized in the War of 1812, and fought throughout the struggle with England. After this war the army was reduced and the Eighteenth was mustered out of the service. When Lincoln's call for troops went out the regular army was enlarged and the Eighteenth Infantry was revived.

During the Civil War the regiment formed a part of the Army of the Cumberland and Tennessee, serving under General Thomas. It participated in the battle of Chickamauga and Lookout Mountain, and, in fact, the battles of the Western campaign. After the war was over the Eighteenth was engaged in Indian campaigns for many years. One of its companies was entirely annihilated in the "Fort Petteerman Massacre." Lieutenant Fetterman being the officer in command of the company. The rest of the regiment arrived too late, but routed the Indians. At this time the regiment was commanded by Col. Carrington, who was a Brigadier General of Volunteers in the Civil War. His successor was Col. Ruger, late Major General Ruger. Under his command Fort Assiniboine, in Montana, was built and occupied by the regiment and the Sioux War was fought.

After this campaign the Eighteenth was stationed in Kansas and Colorado, and then was assigned to the Department of the Rio Grande, where it occupied Forts Sam Houston and Bliss, and participated in the chase after Garcia, who got up the so-called "Garcia Rebellion" against Mexico. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War the regiment, with the Twenty-third, which was also stationed in Texas, was ordered to New Orleans, with a view to its being sent to Cuba. When the news of Dewey's victory was heard the plans were changed and the Eighteenth, Twenty-third and Fourteenth Infantry regiments, Fourth Cavalry, Sixth Artillery and numerous volunteer regiments went to Manila with the second expedition.

The regiment stopped some time in Honolulu on the way over and on its arrival in the Philippines participated in the siege and capture of Manila and the capture of Iloilo. It occupied Cavite and then did work in the field in Pinar until the collapse of the rebellion. In September, 1901, it returned to the United States and occupied various posts, most of it being quartered at Fort Russell, in Wyoming, and Fort Logan, in Colorado.

April 1, 1903, the Eighteenth again went to the Philippines and has been stationed in Cebu ever since. It has occupied three posts. The headquarters have been at Tacloban, Leyte, where Col. Hall has been in command. Lieut. Col. Paulding commanded the post at Cebu, Island of Cebu, and Maj. Young that at Ormos, Island of Leyte. The department commander was General Carter. Most of the work in the Philippines was the building of roads and bridges, with a little fighting. The only field duty was that of Co. A, Captain Clark, which participated in the expedition sent out in June, 1903, to punish the religious fanatics who murdered Captain Overton in Sulu.

The regiment carries with it one of the most valuable battle flags in the army. Its stripes are covered with the names of battles in which the Eighteenth has participated until they are a mass of embroidery. The silken banner has seen so much service that it is in tatters and almost ready to fall to pieces. As soon as the regiment gets to the States a new one will be ordered and the old one filed with the other treasured relics of the regiment. The new flag, in accordance to the recent ruling of the War Department, will have the names of the battles inscribed on metal rings around the flagstaff instead of having them embroidered on the flag itself.
